

ABSTRACT

A power supply system and method are disclosed that may incorporate a plurality of cascading power units arranged in parallel, a connection interface between the plurality of cascading power units and an electronic load, wherein the connection interface prevents current from entering one of the plurality of cascading power units from another of the plurality, and wherein each one of the plurality of cascading power units has a maximum effective output voltage greater than a next one of said plurality.